

Josh Boswell is currently the Director of Government Relations for the Society of Hospital Medicine and is responsible for the overall strategic development, implementation, and administration of the government relations goals of the Society. In this capacity he engages in Federal legislative and regulatory advocacy; representing the interests of hospital medicine both on the Hill and within the relevant administrative agencies. He staffs SHM's Public Policy Committee, and directs SHM's grassroots advocacy efforts. Prior to joining SHM, Josh served in the United States Army, then spent 5 years as a legislative assistant for a Pennsylvania State Senator before attending law school.
